For Sale: Jeff Sundin's 2020 Lund Alaskan 2000 Tiller Available Fall 2020 $34,449.00

I've been running Lund Alaskans for a long time now; in fact I got my first one about 20 years ago.

Right from the beginning, I've loved the balance of utility and comfort the Alaskan provides.

As far as I'm concerned, these boats are the fisherman's equivalent of having a 4X4 pickup truck for the water. They have allowed me to go anywhere and do anything without sacrificing the comfort of my customers.

Throughout the years, I've watched the folks at Lund steadily improve the Alaskan. Every year they've updated this or relocated that until 2020 I can honestly say that every single thing about this boat is the perfect setup for me and the fishing situations I frequently

The Mercury ProXS 115 Big Tiller with Integrated ZTF Tiller Valve is a perfect match for this rig too. The engine purrs like a kitten and using the RPM adjustments allow me to troll down as slow or as fast as I want. And at speeds approaching 40 MPH, I can get to my fishing spots fast too.

The Integrated ZTF Tiller Valve isn't a full scale "power steering system", but it works great. In fact, when I'm running this engine, I can't feel any difference in feel at the tiller between this and my 200 Verado which does have the full power steering system; they are really that close.

I've had every one of my Alaskan's on Shoreland'r roller trailers and this one is no exception. I can launch these boats in shallower water than any other rig out there. If there's enough water to float a canoe, then there's enough water to float my Alaskan too.

It will easily go where most other boats won't. In fact I was so impressed with my first Alaskan that I had some stickers printed for the side that said "4X4". These boats can just go anywhere.

The Humminbird Helix 10 CHIRP Mega SI + GPS G3N, combined with the Terrova Bow mount trolling motor allows me to control any forward presentation. The Traxxis transom mount allows me the flexibility to back troll anywhere I want.

The rig is for sale now, and will be available for pickup this fall. The price is $34,449.00 and everything that's included.
